

My Short Corona Story

I'm not gonna lie at first it was pretty hard. I am currently virtually in MYP5. When we started to hear about corona and other schools closing I was sure that ISG had no plans of doing so. That Friday joking about hoping that school would be closed so we could have "vacation" was actually our last. In the beginning, it was hard to get motivated to do any school work, and watching Netflix all day seemed like a much better option. Being isolated from only my family company was also something that took getting use to. After a while dealing with online school I realized that it was actually not so bad. The earliest I had to get up was 9 and I did not have to worry about getting dressed and could go to class in my pj's. I could also work whenever I wanted as long as assignments where uploaded before the deadline. Now with partially online school and the other half in person, I think it's a good bend between to the two. I'll still get to attend class in bed half the time and the other half I can actually see my friends.